Before I Fall

I have never dedicated a newsletter to a movie before and will credit "Before I Fall" as one of the most poignant films I've seen. I was guided from above to see the movie and went because of it. Now, I sit here thinking everyone should see it. It, to me, could be a life changer.

Each day you wake it is truly a new day. It isn't always an option, however. What you do that day will affect the rest of your life, the world and eternity.

The best guidance I can provide is to live in the moment allowing God to direct your life through inspiration and for you to follow that inspiration as the guidance would be for your highest and best.

As someone who loved parties, networking and socializing, I was looking forward to a one-time event that I was thrilled to have been invited to years ago. I kept feeling I was not to go but allowed my desires to get the better of me and went. While on route, I ended up in a four-car accident with the most injuries. Because we were stopped in highway traffic, I was turned toward the driver chatting. If I had been facing straight ahead, it may not have been as bad. Do I listen more to my inspiration since then? Yes, as learning the hard way isn't always as pleasant.

Every nuance and every moment and every choice can have a profound impact. That accident and this movie demonstrate that fact.

Life doesn't have to be left to chance. By tuning in and asking God for direction, you are guided toward the highest and best outcomes with good to all. It is better to do that any have an easier life, avoiding creating negative karma, while eliminating the need to reincarnate and learn more lessons.

If the choice is to follow personal experience and preference, your choices are made out of the past and not out of the broader potential of the future known by the all knowing source of it all.

Why not simplify life while guaranteeing better results overall with this tactic? You wouldn't want to have to reincarnate, cause anyone any undue harm, limit your possibilities or have to live your day over until you get the big picture and learn what was optimal the hard way, would you?

I would love to know if you watched the movie, which is in the theaters now and to hear what you thought of the movie within our Help from Heaven group on Facebook.

Wishing you a wonderful weekend.

Faithfully yours,

Joy
