The Holidays

I keep hearing this battle continue of whether to wish someone a Merry Christmas or Happy Holidays. Some seem to have an issue that by stating Happy Holidays, that they are diminishing Christmas somehow. Sometimes there's judgment conveyed as to how someone shares good wishes. I remember Jesus saying, "I taught judge not".

Here are my comments and below you will find a message from Jesus that addresses the holidays from his perspective. I got the impression he would not likely be offended.

I am grateful when someone gives me good wishes of any kind. I am not going to sit in judgment if they say Happy Holidays instead of Merry Christmas. When you say Happy Holidays, I believe, you are including all who celebrate whatever religious holiday as well as New Years celebrations. Some celebrate two different religious holidays as well as the new year. Why not encompass all? Why be offended if someone is more generic? Not everyone knows what someone celebrates unless they know them well.

May you find joy in whatever you celebrate!

Blessings,

Joy

PS Today would have been my mom's birthday. I want to wish her a happy birthday even though she is in Heaven. I will hopefully be able to chat with her later.

Message from Jesus

Each month when I do the group healing call, I have a message or messages from Heaven. This month I had two messages. One message was from Jesus addressing the holidays and the other from God. I don't normally share those messages with anyone but the participants because they are often for them specifically regarding the topic we are clearing that month. This message, however, Jesus wanted shared with everyone. You can find it here.

Message from God

The full message addressed a dispensation setting the callers free from certain karma. But, this was an excerpt from God's message that is applicable to all.

"Go forth this day and serve me with a new light and vigor, knowing that by being love, showing love and expressing love in everything that you do, that you will be serving me and that my dear children is all that you need do.

Be the light this holiday season that all need see. You be the light of this world."

There is also a message from him this week with his insights and an invitation. You can read that here.
