Update

As you've noticed, we changed up some of the formats. We will be going through a number of changes over the next year. We are entering a new time and opportunity and I am changing with the times and the opportunities as presented for the next phase of my work. During this change, we all appreciate everyone's flexibility.

Flexibility is key right now as the changes occur in the world. Being attached to the past is what holds you there and blocks effortlessly moving into new possibilities. Remember always that surrendering to God is the way to not only stay afloat but soar. In each moment that something disturbing occurs, surrender the situation, your feelings and concerns over to God.

In light of my upcoming travels, I am including here an article on why it is important to clear travel, which is exactly what I am doing in preparation for my trip.

Wishing you safe travels and a wonderful weekend.

Blessings,
Joy

Why It is Important to Clear Travel?

I clear travel for my private clients when trips come up for them. I include every person, place and thing from the time they leave home until they return. But why and how?

Unless you clear the path ahead, there could be unforeseen challenges. You sweep your walkway so no one trips or picks up unnecessary dirt. You clear the energy, karma, past memories that could trigger a negative reaction or experience.

You want to improve outcomes such as weather, times, engagement with others, baggage, flight, schedule, timing, airport, traffic and passenger issues.

If you lived in a country before but this is the first time visiting, you may trigger past-life memories that end up being moved more to the forefront and then you begin operating out of those memories as well as your other memories. Your subconscious memories and programming greatly influence your results both in what you attract as well as experience.

We clear with the flight crew, air traffic control and gate agents, etc. for a better outcome. We clear with everyone you will encounter on the rest of the trip because you never know what past connections you share and most relationships have issues to clean up between them. Why not clear your karma with someone before meeting with them than have that karma triggered with the encounter?

When you clear with the purpose of the trip, we are asking that those special events, meetings, weddings and vacations be elevated to have more fun and effectiveness and ease with all.

Most report having better experiences when I have cleared in advance. Of course, those who clear more than just once have even better results. As you can imagine, there's a lot of things you can clear with travel including the countries and cities visited, the people along the way and the food and drink you enjoy.

When you clear someone's home, hotel room or conference or meeting room before getting there, you raise the vibration of the environment. You also lessen the opportunity of picking up the energies of others as well as lower energies that can bring yours down. You, of course, don't want ghosts haunting you at night, so by clearing the space before hand, you are free from that dynamic. And, of course, if you sleep in a hotel bed that had numerous people before you with mixed energies, anger, fears and worries, you don't want to absorb those energies into your energy field.

When you return from a trip, it is also a good idea to clear with the same elements

Let's get to know each other, the challenges you face and the solutions I provide. If there's a fit, we can decide together what options are best for you.

because you have picked up energies as well as attachments to people, places and things that can diminish your energy with those attachments in place. By cutting the attachments your energies won't be drained from the invisible cords that can still be connected.

The more people who clear their travels, the more they help elevate people as well as the locations around the world and help everyone to experience a better and easier life.
